

New York Stock Market

New York, November 16.—The most effective influence on today's stock price movement was the early aggressive operations for the advance of raw brokers which were the feature of yesterday's market. The traders watched for the appearance of the order in United States Steel, Union Pacific and Reading. They sold these stocks and the general list because the order failed to appear. This was taken to indicate the abandonment of the attempt to inaugurate a new market move by concentrated buying in these stocks. The resumption of the same kind of buying in United States Steel and Union Pacific in the market pushed prices up again and left them higher than last night.

The general decline prices of meat and other commodities in for a great deal of attention, both by reason of its direct bearing on money market affairs and its broader implications in the cattle market. A further decrease in the price of the public feeding of the bank loans.
